Un compagnon d'aventures

Jean Passepartout est l'inséparable majordome et compagnon de Phileas Fogg dans le roman de Jules Verne, Le tour du monde en quatre-vingts jours. Les deux tables basses sur roulettes, Jean Passepartout, s'avèrent être des « compagnons de voyage » aussi raffinés que serviables. Leur structure en bois, disponible en plusieurs essences, s'agrément de finitions en bronze. Les deux tables Passepartout sont de hauteur différente, l'une étant aisément escamotable sous l'autre, ce qui facilite une multitude de configurations. Une version Large est également proposée.
